Have fun (and please read the copyright information). Coloring page © 2008 Margaret Esaak Artist: Leonardo da Vinci Title: Mona Lisa (La Gioconda) Edited: About 1503-05 Original: Oil painting on poplar wood panel Original working dimensions: 77 x 53 cm (30 3/8 x 20 7/8 in.) To see where: Musée du Louvre, Paris is arguably the most easily recognized painting on Planet Earth. Although she now has superstar status, more modest beginnings have skyrocketed: Lisa commissioned her husband Francesco, a Flor florence merchant, to celebrate the birth of the couple's second son and decorate a wall of their new home. He never decorated Giocondo's house. Leonardo kept the portrait with him until his death in 1519, and later passed it on to his assistant and heir, Salai. Salai's heirs also sold it to King François I of France, who has remained the national treasure of that country ever since. Thousands of visitors see the Musée du Louvre open every day, spending about 15 seconds each. Longer content you will surely be shown. The coloring © 2008 Margaret Esaak reveals many of the gifts of Sleeping Gypsy Henri Rousseau's, which was at least his vivid imagination. He didn't see a desert or a real lion outside the zoo, but he also created a fascinating scene featuring the sleeping title character. He was very skilled at composition, but at the time his hard lines and straight perspectives were often ridiculed. He also gave great importance to the details. Here the lion's hair was painstakingly painted one strand at a time, the lines of the gypsy robe and the ropes on the mandolin are laid with the same meticulous care. Perhaps Rousseau's greatest gift was his belief that he deserved to be called an artist. Whatever everyone thought or said about their work, and a lot of it was negative. Time says he did it, and it's a lesson for all of us. Coloring page © 2009 Margaret Esaak Vincent executed this world-famous picture from memory while staying at Saint-Paul-de-Mausole (a mental institution near Saint-Rémy) in June 1889. He had voluntarily accepted himself only a month earlier and was not allowed to paint outside at this time. Still, like he did for this canvas, he could look through the window in his room. We love to associate this painting with Vincent's deepest soul. The cypress tree, hills and church tower connect us to the sky where the stars and the planet Venus return in a moon-dominated night sky. They are eternal, just as the human soul should be. Can. People suggest that the severity of his brush strokes reflects Vincent's suffering, hospitalized mind. I just think I like to think that you've seen the Big Picture and quickly created something so permanent that we'll all see it. Coloring page © 2008 Margaret Esaak Artist: Vincent van Gogh Title: Sunflower (12 Sunflowers with Vase) Created: 1888 Original work dimensions: 92 x 73 cm (36 1/4 x 28 3/4 in.) Where to see: Neue Pinakothek, already a sunflower fan in Munich, Vincent was certainly happy to see Arles, France, growing abundantly when he moved in February in 1888. During his months in Arles, he made at least three versions of 12 Sunflowers and 15 Sunflowers and used some of these canvases to decorate Paul Gauguin's bedroom (briefly) in the home and studio area they shared. Remember that the paint tubes produced were a relatively new invention in Vincent's day, and sunflowers faded rapidly. Dreamed! If you had to stop mixing colors, rather than squeezing large stains of chrome yellow or cadmium red onto its palette (or, really, canvas flat), the immediate vitality of its Sunflower series might not be all that. Coloring page © 2008 Margaret Esaak Artist: Grant Wood Title: American Gothic Created: 1930 Medium: Oil on beaverboard Dimensions of original work: 29 1/4 x 24 1/2 in. (74.3 x 62.4 cm) To see where: The Art Institute of Chicago About This Study: American Gothic means depicting an anonymous farmer (his sense of humor is evident) and his daughter. They stand in front of an Iowan farmhouse built in the Gothic style of Carpenter, which is used to sell as Sears, Roebuck and Co kits, hence the Gothic part of the title. Models for this painting were Grant Wood's sister Nan (1900-1990) and local dentist Dr. Byron H. McKeeby (1867-1950). Wood, however, successfully blurred their age difference to the point where I, for one, they were supposed to represent a married couple until they took art history courses at university. For American citizens, the American Gothic is our Mona Lisa. Painting is both recognized worldwide and a large number of parody subjects. Unlike the Mona Lisa's imaginary past, anyone can visit this farmhouse. Coloring page © 2008 Margaret Assaak Actress Marilyn Monroe a few days after suicide in 1962, and Andy Warhol still come across a publicity of Monroe in a tying store. The original image was taken by an unnamed 20th Century Fox Studios photographer for the 1953 thriller Niagara and was a half-length portrait showing Ms. Monroe's considerable charm in a halterneck blouse. Warhol purchased the photo copy, then it can be cropped, enlarged and reproduced on eight canvases with the silk scanning process. On each of these eight canvases, acrylic also drew a completely different color scheme. This (now world famous) Marilyn Warhol created its first core The Lone New York exhibition and Elvis Presley, along with a specific brand of dollar bills and soup's cans, launched his Pop Art career. As you can see with Lemon Marilyn (1962), there is no wrong way to go when choosing your own color scheme. In fact, Warhol revisited his Marilyn Series several times over the next 20 years and made some rather curious choices of his own (think: zucchini, black-brown and lime green). One assumes that your Do-It-Yourself Marilyn could be a pirate or ninja, wear a terrible wig, or star-treat with glitter, sequins and possibly a few glued feathers. Printable coloring pages are provided here for three reasons: to help kinesthetic and visual learners enjoy reading art history. Helping educators, parents and caregivers provide learning activities. It's for fun. If you are working with young artists please get the third reason for the heart, and do not correct your work.
